

Upland city treasurer to retire

30 years is really a nice round figure

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

After 30 years serving the city of Upland, Robert Thrall has decided it's time to let someone else shoulder their civic duty for a while.

Now that the decision is made and he will not be running for the April 8 election, Thrall faces a mere month and a half more as city treasurer, completing 22 years in that position alone.

He also served for eight years on the city council from 1950 to 1958, and in that total of three decades, Thrall has gathered more than a few memories.

His family moved to the West End shortly before he was born, and except for a stint as an infantryman in the U.S. Army Thrall has remained firmly entrenched in the area.

Shortly after his return from the service, Councilman Paul Hottel told Thrall he was contemplating retirement, and asked the young man if he might be interested in trying for the position.

Thrall's answer was yes, and by spring 1950 he was chosen to fill the vacant council seat.

His wife of nearly 40 years, Nellie, believes that Thrall is the youngest person elected councilman. Current City Clerk Dee Carpenter said she couldn't be sure, but that at 29 he was at least very close.

Thrall ran for re-election in 1954, serving a total of eight years before deciding to spend more time with his growing accounting firm in Upland.

But the council wasn't about to let him off that easily. "Not long afterwards the treasurer (Jack Atwood) resigned, and they needed someone to take his place," recalls Thrall. "I suppose the council asked me to fill the position because I was a C.P.A., but whatever it was, I agreed to it."

So by April 28, 1958, Thrall was again working for the city. He remembers the treasurer's salary as being roughly $75 a month then, as opposed to the $225 the position earns now.

The duties of the job have changed almost as much as the salary, however. Many of the treasurer's responsibilities were shouldered by the deputy treasurer by the mid-1960s, a full-time city employee who now handles the day-to-day functions of the office.

Thrall said he still puts in about the same amount of time he did 20 years ago — 20 to 30 hours a month — but his actual duties have diminished.

"The treasurer still reconciles the bank accounts, in which there are thousands of transactions a month, and reports on where city money is invested and on some bond accounts, such as old water and sewer bonds."

"But nearly all the investing is done by the deputy treasurer, as are most of the bond issues."

Thrall maintains that his experience as an accountant is valuable, if not vital, to his fulfilling the duties of the office.

"I have a real sense of obligation, plus the fact it's been no real strain for me. I would be dealing with money and finances anyway, and it's easier for me to take care of the treasurer's duties than it would be for some people."

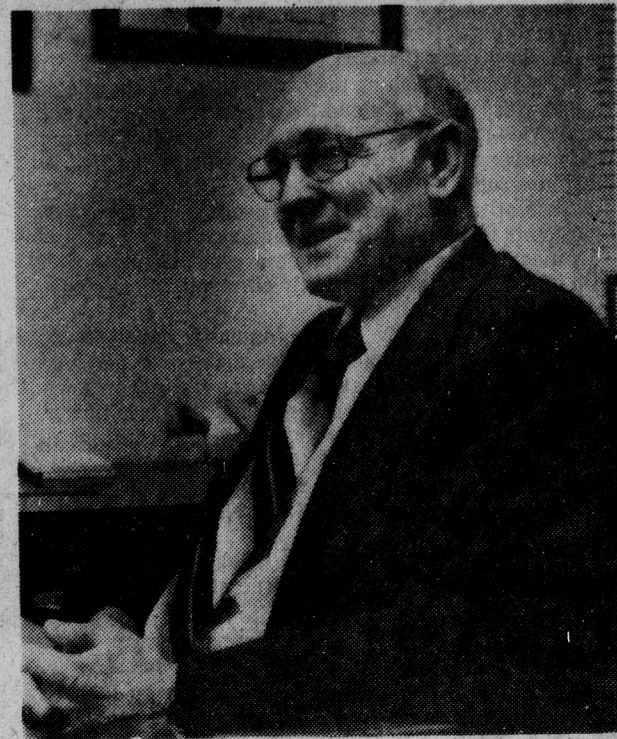

Because it is a part-time position, taken in addition to a regular full-time job, he said he couldn't imagine anyone doing it for the money — the rewards had to be of another kind.

The community has grown nearly five times as large since he has been involved with city hall. A 1950 census listed a total of 9,203 people, as opposed to 44,756 as of last July.

The city's financial situation has grown even more dramatically — nearly 9,400 percent — from an adopted budget of $188,172 in 1946-47, to $17,771,988 in 1979-80.

He will continue working, he said, until he drops. "I see no reason to stop what I'm doing as long as I still enjoy it."

But, he adds, the time has come to end his duties as

Robert Thrall

Upland city treasurer.
After all, 30 years is a nice, round number.
And everyone knows how accountants love numbers.

Proposal sent to council

Upland planners back condo conversion rules

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

After wrestling with the proposed ordinance for more than two hours Tuesday night, Upland planning commissioners approved a stringent set of requirements for condominium conversions within the city.

The proposed amendment to the city's municipal code includes controversial restrictions on size, parking accommodations and treatment of tenants displaced by the conversion of apartments into condominiums.

Representatives from the building industry have protested that the city is taking an anti-development approach to conversions by making regulations too demanding.

Others, including commissioners Thomas Harris and John Zinda, agreed that the document will reflect city policy on the matter, and officials should settle on a definite stand.

Planning Director Bill Young described the delicate balancing act the city will have to perform.

"The trick is to keep an adequate supply of rental housing, so renters are not pushed out of the market," he told commissioners, yet at the same time, keep the housing balance for those who can afford to buy their own home.

The proposed ordinance would replace the current chapter on planned residential development in the municipal code.

The third draft, with changes approved by the commissioners, will be presented to the city council for the March 17 meeting.

One of the more controversial points of the ordinance requires a minimum of four parking spaces per unit, two of which must be in an enclosed garage.

Jim Manning of Acacia Development had a different outlook on the situation.

"When I hear 'four parking spaces,'" he told commissioners, "I hear that the city does not want conversions." He said few apartments provide parking facilities that extensive, and by including the minimum as a requirement, the city is preventing a large number of apartment owners from ever converting.

"And conversions do provide affordable housing," added Manning. "They are generally cheaper because they're already built."

Young countered by saying the ordinance would serve as a guideline, and in circumstances where a developer had an acceptable plan that did not strictly adhere to all requirements it would always be possible to obtain a conditional use permit.

A vote to reduce the required number of spaces to three per unit split commissioners down the middle, with Edward Sloman, Al Canestro and John Meyer in favor of three spaces, and Zinda, Harris and James Cummo opposed. Commissioner Faye Bert was absent.

Work to revise the ordinance began four months ago after the city council asked the commission to set up guidelines for the conversion of apartments into condominiums.

If the ordinance is passed by the council, Upland would be one of a handful of cities in Southern California with such an ordinance.

Developer didn't get permission

Council criticizes condo changes

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

Upland City Council members sharply criticized a Beverly Hills developer Tuesday night for the manner in which changes were made in a 40-unit condominium development without permission from city officials.

The council ordered the developer to respond within 45 days to a list of 22 requests for repair issued by residents of the condominiums, and increased the company's $5,000 bond to $25,000.

The Upland Development Co., headquartered in Beverly Hills, recently completed construction on Walnut Grove Estates, Ninth Street east of San Antonio Avenue.

Original plans approved by the city called for extensive recreational facilities, including two swimming pools, two jacuzzis and two paddle tennis courts.

The firm actually built only one of each of the amenities, slightly larger than originally planned, and added a pool house and additional landscaping. Company representatives said the final dollar amount of the project was more than that submitted to the city.

The developers were appealing a planning commission decision denying the change.

Council members shared the indignation of the commissioners when they learned the modifications and actual construction had taken place without their knowledge.

Ron Lefler, president of the Walnut Groves Homeowners' Association, said the members had "accepted the reduction of amenities," but wanted to assure that the other deficiencies are corrected. Councilman Bill Bottin pointed out that the council was actually dealing with two issues — the developer's negligence in getting changes in the original plan approved before construction, and the work the homeowners wanted completed.

He asked City Attorney Donal Maroney if it would be possible to levy a fine on the developers as a disciplinary measure.

Maroney said normal procedures would be to refuse occupancy of the residences until the developer complied with the previously granted conditional use permit. In this case, however, the occupants had already moved into the units, and the council was left with little leverage, he said.

He added that apparently the real estate commissioner did not look at the conditional use permits, since he allowed the changes without notifying the city.

In other action, the council:

— Denied an appeal on the revocation of the alarm system at a local auto supply store. The Upland Police Department received a total of 10 false alarms from the store in a period of three months, well in excess of the four false alarms allowed in 365 days according to the city's municipal code.

The council told a store representative that the right to re-apply would be considered if another, more reliable system were installed.

This is the second time the city's alarm ordinance has been invoked this year.

— Decided to retain membership in the Arrowhead Justice Association for another year, rather than withdrawing to form a similar group for the West End.

Retail in industry areas gets ok

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

Limited retail use of industrial zones in the city of Upland will soon be allowed, following the city council's approval last week of amendments to the general plan and zoning regulations.

The city previously prohibited any sort of commercial establishment on land zoned for light industrial use. One of the major concerns was the difference in traffic patterns attracted by the two different businesses.

A retail store tends to attract a larger number of people as well as more vehicular traffic, raising a safety question in industrial areas where there may be machinery and no adequate provision for pedestrians.

The change, approved unanimously by the council, 4-0 (with Councilmember Ina Petokas absent), allows retail stores with relatively small volumes of customers to share the industrial-zoned sites.

Planning Director Bill Young said such shops should have relatively specialized merchandise, and may often be outlets for a product made on the premises.

Young illustrated the fine-line difference between commercial uses permitted in the zone and those not, by describing a small factory specializing in making sailboats.

Sale of the finished products would be allowed, he said, as well as other limited merchandise. But if the sale of boats led to the sale of accessories, seat cushions, sails, and finally masks, snorkels and other water-related gear, then the store would no longer be included in the definition of "limited" commercial use.

Young cautioned that the confusion arising from the sometimes confusing definitions may result in his staff having to approach more businessmen for zoning infractions.

"It will work if strongly enforced," Young said of the amendment. "It will also increase the workload on my staff. Someone can start by manufacturing a dress, and next thing you know will have a full line of clothing."

"It's going to be difficult at times to differentiate what 'limited' actually means."

He said there were various businesses in town currently located in industrial zones that were waiting for the council's decision. His staff had postponed acting on the infractions in favor of waiting to see what the council's decision would be.

Members of the Upland Chamber of Commerce praised the move at an earlier meeting, saying it came close to matching the actual current use of the industrial zones.

"That's our goal," said George Robbin of the chamber's economical development committee, "to match city policy with what is actually on the street."

Officials greet the candidates

Upland city officials rolled out the red carpet Thursday night for candidates running in the city's municipal elections April 8.

More than 15 staff members made brief presentations on their respective departments, their duties and responsibilities. Candidates were encouraged to ask questions and learn about the day-to-day operating procedures of city hall.

They also received packets with copies of the budget, a financial statement, organizational chart and other basic information pertaining to the city.

Only six of the 10 candidates were present at the meeting. City Manager Lee Travers said he found out at the last minute that the employees' union was holding interviews the same evening, and may have posed a conflict for some of the candidates.

Those attending the special meeting included mayoral candidates Doyle Alexander and Bill Bottin; A.C. Lawrence, candidate for city council, and Walter Reardon, candidate for city treasurer. Dina Hunter, also running for treasurer, sent her husband as a representative, and City Clerk Dee Carpenter, running unopposed for re-election, also attended.

Inflation continues to nip away federal funds slated for county

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

President Carter's proposed $615.8 billion budget would "hold the line" on federal dollars funneled through San Bernardino County next fiscal year, but inflation would continue to nip away at what those dollars buy.

That was the recent analysis of Lynn Kirkhofer, the county's assistant administrative officer for budget and finance.

Referring to Carter's proposed budget, Kirkhofer noted, "You can't find San Bernardino County in it."

Federal funds reaching the county usually take one of two routes, he explained. Kirkhofer said cabinet secretaries have discretion over the allocation of some funds; other money is received by the state and sent to local governments by formula.

Kirkhofer said his analysis is based on the trends of fund totals in the president's proposal.

In many services, those totals are not keeping pace with inflation, which is currently climbing at an annual rate of 13 percent, he said.

The federal housing and community development block grant, for example, would increase 4 percent, Kirkhofer said. Public health programs would increase 6 or 7 percent; federal revenue sharing, which is up for extension by Congress this year, would stay constant at $6.9 billion, he added.

He pointed out that local governments, the county included, face reductions in their purchasing power with the federal dollars.

While the dollars received fall behind the pace of inflation, the Carter budget forecast for a "slight recession" in 1980-81 could mean increased demand on services through the county such as welfare, health and food-stamp assistance, Kirkhofer said.

The inflation forecast for next year is 10.8 percent. Kirkhofer said the county so far is not plugging these projections into its budget considerations.

"Frankly, we have strong bets they're wrong. Southern California bodes well for us."

Unemployment is remaining low and spending high, he said. Referring to recession, he added, "We're having a tough time finding it here in California."

The recently announced jump to 15.5 percent in the prime lending rate could cause "substantial problems" for the construction industry in the county, he said.

Carter's proposed 5.4 percent increase, after adjustment for inflation, in defense spending should help the county's economy, Kirkhofer noted, although adding, "It's a hard 5 percent to find in San Bernardino County."

Kirkhofer described Carter's budget as an effort to "hold the line" on spending, at least on federal money reaching the county. Asked about any new federal programs, he pointed to energy initiatives in the budget, but noted these are tied to a windfall profits tax on oil companies.

Federal revenue sharing expires this Sept. 30, and Kirkhofer noted extension of the program could "take all summer."

He said the program started under the Nixon administration and continued by former President Gerald Ford for the first time faces both a Democratically controlled White House and Congress.

Should Carter's revenue-sharing proposal pass unscathed, the county still expects a decrease from $12 million to $10 million in its allocation, Kirkhofer said. Fiscal 1980-81 will be the first year California's revenue-sharing allocations feel the influence of Proposition 13, he said.

Kirkhofer explained that the allocations are calculated on the total tax take of the states and that California property tax revenue dropped some $7 billion in the first year of Proposition 13.

Of the $265 million in the county's "discretionary" spending this year, $166 million have some state or federal requirements attached. Other, non-discretionary spending pushes the total county budget to more than $400 million, he said.

Cal Poly shifts to 4-day work week

Due to the rising costs and lessening availability of energy, Cal Poly Pomona will adopt a four-day, 10-hour day work week for university operations during its summer quarter.

The modified work week schedule will begin June 18 and continue through Sept. 19.

During the 10-hour day work week, Cal Poly Pomona office hours will be Monday-Thursday, from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Classes will be scheduled, from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. on those days.

In general, all 65 university buildings will be shut down and utilities turned off after Thursday evening classes. There will, however, be a few exceptions such as the new science building which houses the computer center and various animal colonies, the administration building, the library, the student residence complex and the Kellogg West Center for Continuing education.

In addition, traveling to and from campus four times a week instead of five, under the four-day work week, will result in savings of fuel individually for employees and students.

The energy saving work schedule is one of the alternatives Cal Poly Pomona has employed to save energy and to cut energy expenses. Major among these alternatives are:

— The use of high sodium lighting, which provides twice the lights for half the money, for walk, parking lot and street lights.

— The replacement of fluorescent lamps throughout the campus with 35-watt watt saver tubes instead of 40 watt as used previously.

Chaffey official retires

Earl Osborn, assistant principal for pupil personnel at Chaffey High School, will retire after working at the school for 29 years.

The 65-year-old's retirement becomes effective July 1.

Osborn, with a bachelor's degree from the University of California at Los Angeles and a masters degree from Claremont Graduate School, started teaching at Chaffey on Sept. 18, 1950.

He took a year off from teaching before being named as a counselor in 1955. Osborn was made an assistant principal in 1970.

"I have devoted my life to the school district so it's a very traumatic thing to leave," Osborn said. By retiring, he said he may continue in some sort of personnel work but he said one thing's for sure: "I don't propose sitting in a rocking chair..."

Council on Aging

RCA or the West Valley Regional Council on Aging has re-elected the following officers: Jack Salyer, president; Angel Martinez, vice president; Celia Martinez, secretary; and Abby Reynolds, treasurer.

RCA represents the elderly in the West End and allocates federal monies to non-profit incorporated organizations and agencies that meet the needs of seniors. The council meets at 9:30 a.m. on the second Thursday of each month at 316 W. B St., Ontario. Visitors are welcome.

Board favors elimination of odd-even plan

The county board of supervisors is supporting an Assembly resolution aimed at doing away with the state's mandatory approach to odd-even gasoline sales.

With Supervisor Bob Hammock absent, the supervisors on Monday unanimously backed Assembly Concurrent Resolution 8 (ACR) 88 by Assemblyman Eugene Chappie, R-Yuba City.

The resolution is aimed at giving counties discretion on when and where to impose the odd-even plan.

The Assembly Committee on Resources, Land Use and Energy on Tuesday delayed consideration of ACR 88 until April 8.

The action followed a subcommittee recommendation against the resolution, which, if ultimately successful, would express legislative intent for both houses.

On other matters Monday, the board:

- Extended for two weeks the local state of emergency that has existed since Jan. 15 because of flooding.

The declaration allows homeowners to apply for low-cost loans to repair or replace damaged property and provides money for replacement of public property.

- Made recent rate increases for Rancho Disposal Service, which collects refuse in San Antonio Heights, retroactive to Jan. 1.

When the rates were increased Feb. 4, the effective date was inadvertently left out of the board action.

- Approved a contract between the county and two consulting firms, The Planning Center and ED&W Inc., that consolidates planning, environmental reporting and preliminary engineering for the Chino Hills specific plan.

Supervisors authorized an amount not to exceed $487,080. In consolidating the work, the board also terminated three existing contracts dating back to last November.

Officials said the move was aimed at improving administration, coordination and management for the extensive study.

- Supported a proposal by Attorney General George "Duke" Deukmejian to establish a crime prevention center in Sacramento.

Supervisors also requested county administrators to seek information from the sheriff's department on contingency plans for assistance in event of rioting in state institutions within the county and on reimbursement for county services stemming from police aid and court trials.

Earl Goodwin, chief administrative officer for the county, pointed out later that facilities for male inmates are located within Chino city limits and prison officials would call Chino police first for aid.

Chino police might then call upon mutual aid from the sheriff's department, he said, adding that county would not be reimbursed for mutual aid.

The California Institution for Women is in unincorporated territory outside Chino, and Goodwin said arrangements there may be outlined in a later report.

San Bernardino County is reimbursed on court costs stemming from arrests inside state prisons, Goodwin added.

Skipper will show sailing film

Capt. Irving Johnson, one of the world's best-known sailors, lecturers and photographers, will present his all-color film, "Yankee Sails Inland," at Citrus College Auditorium in Azusa, March 5 at 7:30 p.m.

In their especially built ketch Yankee, built in 1959 in Holland, Johnson and his wife Exy have cruised the waters of the world. Their program, "Yankee Sails Inland," includes scenes from their cruise along the Mediterranean Sea coastline and from trips along inland waterways of Europe to the major cities of Paris, Venice, Seville and Bologna.

Capt. Johnson has been sailing since he was 17. His early films of his trip around the horn in a huge square rigger, the Peking, are now considered documentaries of the Age of Sail and are in the British Museum.

He met his wife when she was a college student on a sailing trip from France to the United States and they were married a year later. They have been sailing around the world ever since and are, without doubt, the most famous man-and-wife team on the high seas.

In their former ship, the brigantine Yankee, they completed seven 18-month voyages around the world.

In summers between voyages, they took more than 2,000 Girl Scout Mariners on short cruises along the New England Coast.

Tickets can be purchased weekday afternoons at Citrus College Auditorium box office, or immediately before the show.

Poets Jerome Rothenberg and Clayton Eshelman will read from their works on Monday, March 10, at 8 p.m. in Dabney Lounge on the Caltech campus in Pasadena.

In "Poems for the Game of Silence," he said, "I look for new forms and possibilities of poetry going back to the primitive and archaic cultures. I have been translating American Indian poetry and exploring ancestral sources of my own in the world of Jewish mystics, thieves and madmen." He has edited five major anthologies, including "Technicians of the Sacred" and "A Big Jewish Book," as well as several little magazines such as "New Wilderness Letter." Rothenberg currently resides in Encinitas, California, working with the Center for Music Experiment at UC San Diego.

Eshelman, Caltech's Dreyfuss Poet in Residence, is a poet, editor, and translator. He has published over 40 volumes of poetry, including "The Gull Wall," "Altars," and "Coils." In 1979 he and Jose Rubia Garcia won the

Autos and lives have operating manuals, rules

By REV. KENNETH R. T. GORDON
Montclair Ministerial Association

Two recent conversations intrigued me. First, a friend told me how his new car failed to work properly. As a matter of fact, some parts did not work regularly at all. But, whenever he took the car to the dealer, everything worked well enough that the dealer refused to look further. My friend sold the car to get relief from a constant headache and mounting frustration.

A second friend had a car that seemed to work perfectly — no problems at all! Suddenly he received a notice that his beautiful car "may have a defective part" and thus was being recalled.

These two autos remind me of people. There are those who see and realize their defects (sins) and would like something done to help them. Others see their lives as going about as well as may be expected and better than most. They are surprised or even a little miffed if told they may need help.

For those of the first variety, I am glad to say you do have a Source of getting help that will not turn you away. As a matter of fact, this One wants to work at your need until it is completely corrected (Romans 6:23; 2 Corinthians 5:27).

For the second type of person, I can only appeal, not on my say so, but on the Manufacturer's word: "All have some defect that does not please nor bring honor or credit to Him (Romans 3:10-12; 3:23)." Instead, He wants to give you a quality that IS pleasing to Him and will bring much more satisfaction to you than ever before (John 1:12; Philippians 4:19), if you will just give Him an honest opportunity.

Incidentally, all this IS on Record in case you would like to check up on it. It's in the "Operator's Manual For Living" (the Bible) and is quite readily available. Portions are typically quite technical, I must admit (for example, parts of the Old Testament and Revelation). They do require special effort or inquiry to understand and apply. But enough material is understandable (Gospels and Epistles) to get even the casual reader started in discovering some tremendous new truths, if one wants.

One last note: the Manual will benefit you to a maximum only if read or studied regularly and applied! Why not try living according to the Manufacturer's specifications — after all you WERE designed by Him! Rev. Gordon is minister at Montclair First Baptist Church.

Ted Tiller's three-act thriller based on the 19th century Bram Stoker novel will be presented by the Theater Arts Department on Feb. 29, and on March 1, 7 and 8.

Alane Hegney, Chino, and Valerie Ann Margaret Hodge, Alta Loma, will perform on alternate nights in the role of the innocent Mina Murray.

David Vandersall, Upland, will portray Mina's fiance Jonathan Harker.

Newly added to the cast as Sybil is Maureen Mary Studer.

Additional cast members include Richard Jesse Arias, Claremont, Dr. Arthur Seward; Richard Owen Jernejic, Alta Loma, Van Helsing; Don Tietz, Ontario, Wesley and Herbert Garlington, Upland, Hennessey.

Reserved seats for "Dracula" are available by calling the Chaffey Theater box office at 987-1745. Both group and senior citizen rates are available. Season ticket holders are advised to call the box office to reserve seats.

Houston Ballet due at Bridges

The Claremont Colleges Center For the Performing Arts continues its artist course with a presentation of "Giselle" by the Houston Ballet on Friday, Feb. 29 at 8:01 p.m. in Bridges Auditorium.

The new production of "Giselle" has been choreographed by Peter Wright, director of the Sadler Wells Ballet of London.

"Giselle" is one of the most celebrated ballets of the Romantic era. The great age of Romantic ballet began at the Paris Opera in 1842 when this new work, revolutionary for its romantic plot and its haunting Gothic setting, set all Europe talking.

The story is about Jamie Lockhart, a young aristocrat who moonlights as a bandit, and his forthcoming marriage to a young heiress, who doesn't want him because she prefers the robber, not knowing they are the same man.

Adding to the plot, the heroine is forever escaping the clutches of her evil, jealous stepmother. Yet in the end, as good fairy tales go, the evil woman is punished and the lovers are reconciled.
